GENERAL HIKE NOTES

PARTICIPATION Mountaineering is an activity with a danger of personal injury or death. Participants should be aware of and accept these risks. People who take part in our club activities do so at their own risk and are responsible for their own actions and involvement.

INTRODUCTORY HIKES An Introductory Hike is organised once per month for aspirant members. Any participant on these hikes must enter their name in our hike log on the bus.

CO-ORDINATION If necessary, tickets are given out on Sundays to ensure that participants reserve a bus place as they arrive.

LEADER The leader has the right to refuse anyone who is not adequately equipped (e.g., without appropriate boots, rainwear, food, torch, hat, gloves, etc).

The leader may alter the route from that described in the program. The leader sets the pace of the hike and walkers are expected to obey the leader's instructions at all times.

EQUIPMENT It is essential to bring good rain gear (both jacket and overtrousers) and to leave cotton t-shirts and jeans at home! Boots must be sturdy with proper ankle support and a rigid non-slip sole such as Vibram.

WALKING STICKS AND RUCKSACKS Remember that walking sticks and rucksacks cannot be brought onto the bus and must be stowed away in the boot during the journey.

Club members interested in leading a hike,

FURTHER AFIELD

Travelling in Romania

We were going to Romania for the first time for a hill walking trip led by Frank Rooney, so we decided to spend an extra 2 days in Bucharest before the rest of the group arrived on July 4.

Bucharest had been called the Paris of the East in the 1920's and 1930's, but after years of Communism, much of that splendour is gone. However, hidden amongst the Communist-issue architecture, there are many gems still left and some of them have been restored beautifully. One of those gems is the Atheneum, now the Philomonic, which several of our group toured.

There is a definite checkerboard effect of the old vs. new and the restored vs. the crumbling. One can enjoy just walking around the city, viewing the buildings, statues, churches and memorials. The Eastern Orthodox churches are numerous, small, but exquisite with much gold and silver in the iconostases, which are frames that hold many icons. The Revival's Memorial consists of the Victory Path leading to Recollection Square and the Pyramid of Victory, partly enclosed by the Reminiscence Wall with the names of those who died in the struggle of December 1989. Although Ceausescu was deposed in 1989, Casa Poporului, built by him to honour himself, was not completed until after his death. It is a massive building almost 100 metres high and 3 kilometres in circumference. It now houses the Parliament, the Senate, and Museum of Contemporary Art. One can tour parts of the building, which unfortunately are looking shabby.

Bucharest is a sprawling city composed of numerous squares (piatas), including Victoriei, Roman, Universitate, Uniril, and Revolutiei connected by their Metro. It is easy to walk from square to square and all the way out to Casa Poporului, stopping at cafes for a cappuccino, and then using the Metro to return. The city is working to pedestrianize the Lipsani area near Universitate and many street cafes have opened there.

The National Art Museum and the Peasant's (Folk Art) Museum are both worth a look. The former, near Piata Revolutiei, had been the royal palace and has a fine collection of icons and iconostases as well 19th- and 20th-century Romanian art.

The Peasants' Museum has wonderful examples of folk art including Romanian Easter eggs, traditional costumes, and religious items. Tucked away in the basement is a haphazard exhibit on Communism, mostly newspaper clippings, and the only picture of Nicolae Ceausescu in the city.

Trains in Romania are well used, and we found on several occasions, that they were fully booked, and we had to catch the next train, or an even later train. We used trains to travel from Bucharest to Brasov, where we stayed for 4 nights, using this as a base into the Carpathian Mountains.

Brasov is a typical European city with a large vibrant square surrounded by shops, restaurants, and cafes. From Brasov we used either a short train hop or a bus to get us to the start of our walks. Most of us chose to hill walk, though a few took a day off to see the local castle or just hang out in the square. The weather was good for that.

We also had an opportunity to meet up with Simone, who many of you may remember as one of the Hillwalkers a few years ago, before she returned home to Brasov. Simone joined us at a wonderful Romanian restaurant that she had recommended. We managed to squeeze a lot into our last day in Brasov, by walking to Bran (Dracula) Castle, and doing a quick tour before taking the bus back, enjoying a Romanian meal, and catching the train to Sinaia. It is a ski town, where we stayed for 5 nights, using the cable cars to get to the start of most of our hikes in the Bucegi Mountains. Sinaia is a small town, but we all got the opportunity to visit the fabulous Peles Palace built by Carol I and tour the local monastery, when we had our first (and only) "rain day." We also enjoyed the Bucegi Restaurant where some of us sampled wild boar, bear, and venison.

Romania is a beautiful and inexpensive country. It is easy and cheap to travel by bus and train to areas wonderful for hiking with real trails, usually well marked, with signs and painted markings on trees. It is a great hill-walking destination, but one should also sample some of the culture, which is readily available even in the smallest towns.

The Matrimonial Suite

The first Romanian eviction, from the luxurious Brasov hotel, had been sharp and quick. The clash of civilizations, east vs. west, capitalism vs. communism, roman vs. cyrillic, all in all plenty of room for Lady Confusion to ply her trade. The disgruntled Duke of Y'tormmarnock, who had so successfully marched his men (and women) to the tops and downs of the twelve hundred Carpathian hills, was temporarily repulsed and uncharacteristically nonplussed.

Fourteen souls were thrown onto to streets, or at least dispatched to an unknown downtown four-storey, multi roomed complex. Earnest reassurances had been provided that the relocation would be seamless, nothing could go wrong.

The arrangements however hinged on the novel concept of the matrimonial suite. Many were still grappling with this new addition to the lexicon. There was an unconfirmed rumour that a matrimonial suite consisted of a room with a bed of width equal too or greater than three foot (the bed, not the room). Nonetheless there remained a certain air of mystery on the subject.

Romanian matrimonial suites were reserved for loving, happily married, opposite sex couples. Inter alia; hating, unhappily married, same sex couples were excluded. We had three such loving, happily married, opposite sex couples along with four temporary, non-married (at least to each other) same sex couples.

The downtown complex had the requisite seven rooms and was further enhanced with a selection of rooms within rooms. It was envisaged that the rather quaintly named "rooms within rooms" were a part solution in providing the minimum three foot separation for temporary, non-married, same sex couples. All went like clockwork for the allocation of the first three rooms.

The loving, happily married, opposite sex couples had found the three foot bed somewhat of a disappointment, though technically within specification. But on mature reflexion, coupled with the belated observation that they had a second three foot bed, they considered and agreed to separate. Under protest it must be said and made clear
